JUNE 12. SENATE.—The greater part of the session was occupied by Senator Chi-lom in a speech in favor of the proposed amendments to the inter-state commerce act. One of the most important causes, he said, that influenced the passage of the in-ter-state commerce law was discrimination by railreads in one form or another. One of the immediate effects of the law had been the abandonment of all pools by carriers, but pooling associations, reorganized and known as traffic associations, still managed but pooling associations, reorganized and known as traffic associations, atili managed to control rates in certain chases of important traffic as arbitrarily as in the palmiest days of the old pooling system. Special freight contracts had been broken up by the law, resulting in largely increased revenues to the roads. The progress made vnder the law in the direction of uniformity of classification had been most gratifying, and in the matter of transportation of passengers some very important reforms had already been accomplished. When Mr. Cullom finished his speech a message from the president was announced vetoing a private pension bill granting a pension to Stephen Schiedel, on the ground that the beneficiary had not been wounded in the army. The fortification appropriation bill was then taken up and Mr. Dolph addressed the senate on the subject of coast defenses. The bill then went over without action and the District of Columbia appropriation bill was taken up and discussed till 5:40 p. m., when the senate adjourned.

DEAD.

Emperor Frederick of Germany is No More.

Sketch of His Career, and of the New Ruler, William II.

Emperor Frederick died in Berlin on the morning of the 15th. All of the royal fami-ly, numerous ministers of state and foreign ambassadors were present at the time of his death.

Frederick William Nicholas Charles, first son of the late emperor of Germany, was born in the New Palace at Potsdam, Oct. 15, 1831. He entered the military service at an early age, after having received a thorough scientific education and a doctor's diploma at the university of Konigsberg. In the army he rose to the rank of general, and had already held several important ap-pointments before the war broke out beween Prussia and Austria, 22 years ago. In that struggle he had under his command three army corps, besides the guard corps, commanded by the Prince of Wurtemberg.

a force aggregating 125,000 nren. In the later part of July, 1810, the Franco-Prussian war was at its hight, and the now dead emderor, then in command of the third German army, 200,000 men in all, was re-pulsing the French at Weissenberg. He crossed swords with Canrobert and MacMacrossed swords with Canrobort and MacMa-hon, and defeated them, as much by supe-rior force, however, as by superior factics. At Sedan he was leading no inst MacMa-hon's forces, and by a skillful move crossed the River Meuse. On Sept. 20, 1870, he was in Versailles and becam the investment of Paris, which occup. of Versailles was concluded.

The late emperor was married 30 years ago to the Princess Victoria Adelaide, daughter of Queen Victoria, a woman of more than ordinary brilliancy. The marriage was opposed by Prince Bismarck and by Von Moitke, who did not quite fancy the close anion with England which it involved. As a result she has had a hard time of it in Germany, even her son doing her grave in suit by his contemptaous references to his English extraction when called on to speak in public. Bismarck and she were mortal enemies, and the opinion had been enterin public. Bismarck and she were mortal enemies, and the opinion had been entertained that she would find a way to crush the power of the chancellor and his old field marshal if sufficient length of life were spared her imperial husband. On her assumption, with him, of the imperial dignity, she showed the superior kind of a woman she was by her organization of the relief system for the flood-stricken people of the valley of the Vistula, to whose aid she gave her personal attention and large contributions from her private purse. She has borne tions from her private purse. She has borne her husband seven children, the Princes William, Henry and Frederick Ernest, and the Princesses Victoria, Frederica, Sophia and Margaret, the youngest girl now sixteen

The New Emperor.

Emperor William II. is about 29 years old Emperor William II. is about 29 years old and has chiefly distinguished himself as the representative of the most objectionable type of the young military Prussians. He is the pride of Prussia's military party and the hope of Bismarck. The chancellor was not in sympathy with the peaceful aspirations of the dead emperor, and both he and old Kaiser Wilhelm set their minds to make ing out of young William a young man who hates everything that is not German.

His hatred of Russia is no less bitter than that of France. During the last 50 years, and especially since the creation of the empire, the relations between Prussia. Prince William is well educated, however. He was carefully trained as a boy. He received private instruction in the class.

He received private instruction in the classic languages, mathematics, physics, relig-ion, gymnastics. He was then sent to the gymnasium at Cassel, where he passed his examination for the university with credit. He was then sent to Bonn, where he studied diligently.

The prince's latest military rank was colonel commander of the hussars of the colonel commander of the hussars of the guard. He is very popular with the army, and doubtless has the capacity of a great general. From all reports he is very anxious to have an opportunity of proving himelf as his grandfather wished him to be, a second Frederick the Great. At present, however, he is only a reckless, hot-blooded colding continually co soldier, continually getting into scrapes. But the old kaiser was very fond of him, nevertheless. He married on Feb. 27, 1881. Princess Augusta Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, to whom, however, he has not been a model husband.

He has already done his share in provid-ing for the successorship to the Prussian and German thrones. His oldest son, Prince William, was born May 6, 1882.
